Dear Hugh,

Christopher and Belinda Barrow are kindly giving a Dinner for me at Leathersellers' Hall on Wednesday, 22nd November 2017. The Leathersellers' Company has probably the best food and wine of all the City of London Livery Companies!

The attached invitation has been sent to you with plenty of advance notice. Please respond either by email or via the attached slip to Mrs. Loretta Floris of the Leathersellers' Company, who has kindly agreed to manage the whole process. All responses should therefore be sent directly to her (and not to me). It would be very helpful if you would respond by 31st August so that we can get an early indication of numbers. If you subsequently have to cancel for any reason, please inform Loretta by email (LFloris@leathersellers.co.uk) or by post (Loretta Floris, The Leathersellers' Company, 7 St. Helen's Place, Bishopsgate, London EC3A 6AB) as soon as possible. Please also inform Loretta if you have any dietary allergies or restrictions.

Transport will run to and from The Sloane Club, 52 Lower Sloane Street, Chelsea, London SW1W 8BS. Please be ready to leave the Sloane Club by 6.00pm. The return journey will start from St. Helen's Place at 10.30pm. Eliza and I do hope that you can make it.

My warmest regards,

Nick

Dinner to celebrate Nick Cook's
88th Birthday
Wednesday, 22nd November 2017

(by kind permission of the Master Leatherseller)

The origins of the Leathersellers lie in the Middle Ages when they controlled London's trade in light leather goods and prepared hides. They obtained their first Ordinances, or rules of government, in 1398 when Richard Whittington was Mayor.

In 1444 the Leathersellers obtained a Royal Charter from Henry VI. The original is displayed in our Court Room. Their first Hall stood near the present junction of London Wall and Copthall Avenue. Leathersellers are number 15 in the order of precedence, and the number of Liverymen is restricted to 150.

In 1543 the Company moved from London Wall to its present site, just off Bishopsgate, thanks to a benefactor, John Hasilwood. He donated most of the £380 required to purchase the lands and buildings of St. Helen's Priory, an important Benedictine convent closed down under Henry VIII.

In recent centuries links between the Leathersellers and the leather trade have diminished, but never disappeared. The Company is still an advocate for the leather industry. However, its work now centres on charitable and educational activities. These are wide-ranging, but include almshouses at Barnet and schools in south-east London (Colfe's and the Leathersellers' Federation of Schools, a trio of schools in Lewisham under the Prendergast banner).

The Company has re-developed its St Helen's property several times as buildings have needed replacement or disaster has struck. The third Hall burnt down in 1819 and the fifth Hall was bombed in 1941. The sixth Hall closed in 2011 and a brand new, seventh Hall, designed by Eric Parry, was officially opened in May 2017 by HRH the Earl of Wessex.

The early 20's century facade has been retained but the new Hall is contemporary in style - though incorporating many features from previous Halls, such as the magnificent wrought-iron gates of 1878 and a splendid stained glass window of 1937 showing Henry VI,

The Court Room is lined in American walnut and is a suitably dignified setting for Court meetings and displaying the Charters. The Reception Room is light and airy, with a central glass sculpture by renowned American artist Dale Chihuly. A dramatic spiral stairway descends to the Dining Hall, where the main feature is a tapestry designed by Victoria Crowe, an artist known for her use of rich colour. Forty metres long, it took three years to weave at the Dovecot Studio in Edinburgh, and incorporates many themes from leather making and the long and illustrious history of the Leathersellers' Company.

Dinner to celebrate Nick Cook's 88th Birthday

Wednesday, 22nd November 2017

(by kind permission of the Master Leatherseller)

NUMBER 88

The number 8 symbolises fortune and good luck in Chinese culture. The number 88 is therefore doubly lucky.

That is a good enough reason for celebrating Nick's 88th birthday on this auspicious day.
